

Webmaster's Vocabulary _13x13_ 2004-03-04

B.B. Huria

Across

- 1 The interconnected world of computers. (10)
- 3 A standard for packet switching which uses packets of a fixed length. (3)
- 4 A software application that provides data or services requested from client programs. (6)
- 7 An interface between the operating system of a computer and a program. (3)
- 8 A means of determining a host's address from its Internet address. (3)
- 10 A public-key encryption application for exchanging files or messages with confidentiality and authentication. (3)
- 11 A protocol for the distribution, retrieval and posting of Usenet

articles through high-speed links available on the Internet. (4)

- 12 That's what R in URL stands for. (8)
- 15 A software program (or command) that performs preprogrammed functions such as keyword searches, monitoring incoming data, etc. (5)
- 18 API stands for Application Program XXXXXXXXX. (9)
- 19 That's what W in WAIS stands for. (4)
- 22 Software that converts scanned images of text documents into editable files. (3)
- 23 Microsoft's Internet-workable version of OLE. (6-1)

- 24 Microsoft's standard for the interface to e-mail. (4)

Down

- 1 A World Wide Web specification for designing layout and style elements of a web page. (3)
- 2 Advertising term indicating the percentage of viewers who click on a banner advertisement and follow the link. (3)
- 3 A graphic or pictorial representation of a user in a 3-D chat area. (6)
- 4 That's what S in SMTP stands for. (6)
- 5 That's what R in PERL stands for. (9)
- 6 The number of times a viewer sees an advertising banner. (8)
- 9 That's what P in ASP stands for. (4)
- 13 That's what U in URL stands for. (7)
- 14 That's what C in CTR stands for. (5)
- 16 That's what G in PGP stands for. (4)
- 17 That's what N in Windows NT stands for. (3)
- 20 A worldwide network that allows one to converse with others in real time. (3)
- 21 The exchange of information through the use of an electronic messaging system. (3)