

Webmaster's_Vocabulary_15x15_2008-10-21

B.B. Huria

Across

- 1 That's what C in IRC stands for. (4)
- 2 Short for "System Operator". (5)
- 5 It stands for the American Standard Code for Information Interchange. (5)
- 7 That's what R in CTR stands for. (4)
- 8 A connection made via the internet to another website. (3)
- 9 The name that identifies a user to a computer network. (8)
- 10 A name, usually short and easy to remember, that is translated into another name. (5)
- 13 That's what T in CTR stands for. (7)
- 16 Advertising term indicating the percentage of viewers who click on a banner advertisement and follow the link. (3)
- 18 Email sent to multiple addresses in one huge mailing. (4,5)
- 21 The simultaneous execution of two or more assignments by one program. (5-7)
- 22 That's what E in EDI stands for. (10)
- 25 That's what N in DNS stands for. (4)
- 27 The Internet's distributed database system used to map names with the appropriate IP address. (3)
- 28 ADSL stands for

Down

- 3 Asymmetric Digital Subscriber _____. (4)
- 4 A temporary storage bin in memory and on your hard drive. (5)
- 5 Text that can usually be automatically inserted at the bottom of e-mail messages. (9)
- 6 Handheld computing and communication devices. (3)
- 7 A graphic compression and decompression standard. (4)
- 8 A current standard for authoring World Wide Web documents. (4)
- 9 That's what R in AVR stands for. (11)
- 11 A worldwide network that allows one to converse with others in real time. (3)
- 12 That's what S in SQL stands for. (10)
- 14 A common graphics format for Web images. (3)
- 15 That's what A in ASP stands for. (6)
- 17 Temporary memory that your computer uses to store information. (3)
- 19 That's what K in JDK stands for. (3)
- 20 That's what M in MIDI stands for. (7)
- 23 A World Wide Web specification for designing layout and style elements of a web page. (3)
- 24 That's what N in Windows NT stands for. (3)
- 26 The exchange of information through the use of an electronic messaging system. (3)